ORDER

AND NOW, this 7th day of February 2022, upon consideration of the Plaintiffs' "Amended Motion for Special Injunction with Notice and Preliminary Injunction after a Hearing," and following hearings on November 19, 2021 and January 24, 2022, it is hereby DIRECTED that Plaintiffs' Amended Motion for preliminary injunctive relief is DENIED.

To the extent any party seeks that the Court hold further proceedings on modification (blue penciling) of the Non-Competition Covenant's overly broad geographic scope, such party must petition the Court.

This Court notes that Defendant Janoski remains obligated to all terms and conditions set forth in his Confidential Separation Agreement and Employment Agreement, which prohibits his disclosure to the Long Home Defendants of any of West Shore's confidential information and trade secrets, and Defendants must continue to comply with the following conditions:

1. All Defendants must return any of West Shore's confidential information and trade secrets within their current possession, regardless of format;
2. All Defendants must immediately return and deliver to West Shore all West Shore documents, data, or property currently within Defendants' possession or control;
3. All Defendants are prohibited from misappropriating, using or disclosing to any person or entity West Shore's confidential information and trade secrets; and possessing any original copies or summaries of West Shore's confidential information and trade secrets in any form, electronic or otherwise;

Finally, this Court recognizes that the holdings set forth in this Opinion and Order are largely based upon the representations made at the Supplemental Hearing by Dave Normandin, President of the Long Home Defendants, that Long Home will honor Defendant Janoski's Non-Competition Covenant with Plaintiffs and will limit its business solely to roofing sales and installations through the expiration of the Non-Competition Covenant, on April 14, 2023. As such, this Order is entered without prejudice to the Court re-considering the Amended Motion should these representations change.

WEBPAGEFX, INC. v. BMARKO STRUCTURES, LLC

NO. 2020 CV 12168 CV

Civil Action – Employment Law - Breach of Contract – Enforceability of No-hire Restrictive Covenant

The Court overruled defendant's preliminary objections, in the nature of a demurrer, which sought to dismiss plaintiff's complaint alleging breach of contract against defendant for violating the terms of their no-hire provision.

1. Plaintiff, a Pa. corporation and provider of digital marketing services, entered into a contract with defendant, a Georgia limited liability company in the business of modular construction, to provide it with web marketing services. The contract included a "no-hire" or "no-poaching" provision that precluded defendant, for a five-year period after services completion, from hiring "any current or former employee [of plaintiff]." In 2020, the employee Wise, who was assigned by plaintiff to work with defendant, resigned from plaintiff's employment and was immediately hired as defendant's marketing manager.

2. Plaintiff's complaint included a single count for breach of contract against defendant for breaching the no-hire provision. It sought monetary damages for revenues it claims Wise would earned for plaintiff had defendant not poached him.

3. Defendant argued that the no-hire provision was unenforceable as a matter of law pursuant to Pittsburgh Logistics Sys., Inc. v. Beemac Trucking, LLC, 249 A.3d 918 (Pa. 2021). There, in a matter of first impression, our Supreme Court held that the no-hire provision at issue, which was ancillary to a services contract between business entities, was unenforceable under the reasonableness test it applied to no-hire provisions.

4. This Court overruled defendant's demurrer holding that Pittsburgh Logistics was not applicable because plaintiff sought damages and not equitable relief. Under Pennsylvania law, the reasonableness of a contractual term in a restraint of trade provision is not relevant where damages are sought. As such, the Pittsburgh Logistics reasonableness test did not apply to this matter.

5. In dicta, the Court noted that had it found Pittsburgh Logistics applicable, it would have likely held that the no-hire provision was unenforceable as unreasonably in restraint of trade, primarily because it was overbroad and harmed the public. The Court further noted, had the issue been reached, it would have declined to "blue-pencil," or reform, the overly broad restrictions to make them enforceable because that remedy is only available to a court of equity.

OPINION

In this matter, Plaintiff asserts that it is entitled to money damages from Defendant as the result of Defendant's breach of the parties' no-hire provision when Defendant "poached" Plaintiff's former employee. Defendant has filed a preliminary objection in the nature of a demurrer asserting that the no-hire provision is unenforceable as a matter of law pursuant to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court's recent decision in Pittsburgh Logistics Sys., Inc. v. Beemac Trucking, LLC, 249 A.3d 918 (Pa. 2021). For the reasons set forth below, this Court overrules Defendant's demurrer, holding that Pittsburgh Logistics is not applicable here.

Background

Plaintiff WebPageFX, Inc. (Plaintiff or "WebFX"), a Pennsylvania corporation, is a provider of digital marketing services. It filed its Complaint on April 20, 2021 against Defendant BMarko Structures, LLC (Defendant or "BMarko"), a Georgia limited liability company in the business of modular construction. Plaintiff alleges that on February 17, 2019, the parties executed a services contract ("Contract") whereby Plaintiff agreed to provide Defendant with various technical services, including search engine optimization, project management, digital content, and web marketing strategy services, identified as the "BMarko Project." Paragraph 7 of the Contract's "Terms & Conditions," includes a restrictive covenant, commonly referred to as a "no-hire provision," that provides: "For a period of five (5) years after the Project and future services completion, [BMarko] agrees not to hire or utilize the outside services of any current or former WebFX employee." (Complaint Exbt. A (emphasis added)) Plaintiff asserts that this ancillary restrictive covenant clause is intended to prevent Defendant from poaching its employees in whom Plaintiff has invested substantial time and financial resources. The Contract does not contain any language addressing the remedies available to Plaintiff should the Defendant hire an employee in violation of the no-hire provision.

In June of 2018, Plaintiff hired Tyler Wise, and asserts that it thereafter invested substantial time, financial resources, and other resources to train him to effectively provide services to Plaintiff's clients. In 2019, Plaintiff assigned Wise to work on the BMarko Project, and Wise provided services to Defendant until he voluntarily resigned from Plaintiff's employment, effective February 21, 2020. Plaintiff alleges that Wise immediately began to work for Defendant as a marketing manager. Plaintiff further alleges that Defendant offered Wise employment while he was still employed by Plaintiff.

Plaintiff asserts in its Complaint a single count for breach of contract against BMarko for violating the no-hire provision. It seeks monetary damages for revenues it claims it would have earned for services Wise would have provided for Plaintiff's customers had he not been poached by Defendant. Plaintiff alleges that until Wise resigned, his services had generated annual revenue of over $240,000 for Plaintiff.

Plaintiff additionally asserts in its Complaint that Wise's employment agreement with it contained post-employment restrictions, including non-compete and non-solicitation provisions. Plaintiff, however, has not named Wise as a party to this action, has not attached Wise's employment agreement to the Complaint and does not otherwise assert a claim seeking equitable relief to enforce the restrictive covenants against Wise including that he be enjoined from working for Defendant. Instead, Plaintiff's current action is solely grounded on a claim that Defendant BMarko breached the no-hire provision causing Plaintiff monetary damages.

Legal Discussion

Defendant has filed preliminary objections to Plaintiff's Complaint arguing that Plaintiff's claim for breach of the no-hire provision is a legally insufficient claim upon which no relief can be granted, pursuant to Pittsburgh Logistics. When reviewing preliminary objections, the Court must treat as true all well-pleaded, material, and relevant facts together with all reasonable inferences that may be drawn from those facts. Mellon Bank v. Fabini, 650 A.2d 895, 899 (Pa. Super. 1994). Preliminary objections in the nature of a demurrer asserting that the complaint is legally insufficient may only be sustained when "it appears with certainty that the law permits no recovery under the allegations pleaded." Green v. Mizner, 692 A.2d 169, 172 (Pa. Super. 1997). Preliminary objections should be sustained only in cases so free from doubt that trial would amount to a "fruitless exercise." Smith v. Brink, 561 A.2d 1253, 1255 (Pa. Super. 1989). When any doubt exists as to whether a demurrer should be sustained, the preliminary objection should be overruled. Green, 692 A.2d at 172.

In Pittsburgh Logistics, our Supreme Court, in a matter of first impression, addressed whether a no-hire, or "no-poach" provision that is ancillary to a services contract between business entities is enforceable under Pennsylvania law. While the court declined to hold such a provision per se unenforceable, it found the no-hire provision at issue not enforceable under the facts before it. There, Pittsburgh Logistics Systems (PLS), a third-party logistics provider that arranged for the shipping of customers' freight with selected shipping companies, entered into an agreement with the shipping company Beemac Trucking, under which terms Beemac would provide shipping services to PLS's customers. In addition to a non-solicitation provision prohibiting Beemac from soliciting PLS's customers, the agreement included a no-hire provision prohibiting Beemac from directly or indirectly hiring, soliciting for employment, or inducing or attempting to induce any employee of PLS or any affiliate to leave PLS or an affiliate during the term of the agreement and for two years thereafter. After Beemac hired four PLS employees, PLS filed suit against Beemac, seeking a preliminary injunction to enforce the no-hire provision and enjoin Beemac from employing the former PLS employees; i.e. seeking that Beemac terminate their employment. PLS also filed separate actions against the employees seeking to enforce their non-compete covenants.

The trial court refused to enforce the no-hire provision against Beemac and denied PLS's motion for injunctive relief, holding that no-hire provisions in commercial contracts between two companies violate public policy and are thus unenforceable as a matter of law. The trial court acknowledged that no reported Pennsylvania decision had yet addressed this issue and relied upon cases in other jurisdictions where similar provisions were held to be unenforceable.

On appeal, the Superior Court, en banc, affirmed the trial court's denial of injunctive relief. Pittsburgh Logistics Systems, Inc. v. Beemac Trucking, LLC & Beemac Logistics, LLC, 202 A.3d 801 (Pa. Super. 2019). The Superior Court agreed with the trial court's reasoning that the no-hire provision violated public policy because it prevented the employees, as non-signatories to the contract, from pursuing work in their chosen field. Id. at 808. The Superior Court recognized that each new services contract between PLS and a new carrier results in a new restriction upon current employees. Id. In striking down the no-hire provision, the Superior Court reasoned, "[i]f additional restrictions to the agreement between employer and employee are rendered unenforceable by a lack of additional consideration, PLS should not be entitled to circumvent that outcome through an agreement with a third party." Id. at 810.

PLS appealed to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court to address the following issue: "Are contractual no hire provisions which are part of a services contract between sophisticated business entities enforceable under the law of this Commonwealth." Pittsburgh Logistics Sys., Inc. v. Beemac Trucking, LLC & Beemac Logistics, LLC, 216 A.3d 1032 (Pa. 2019) (per curiam). As a matter of first impression, the Court extensively surveyed decisions issued in six other jurisdictions (three finding the no-hire provisions unenforceable and three finding them enforceable) before reaching its final, unanimous decision that it would transplant to no-hire provisions the same analytical framework it applied in assessing the enforceability of other ancillary restraints on trade, as follows:

Pennsylvania common law has treated restrictive covenants as restraints on trade that are void as against public policy unless they are ancillary to an otherwise valid contract. Socko [v. Mid-Atl. Sys. of CPA, Inc.], 126 A.3d 1266, 1277 (Pa. 2015)] ("[O]ur Commonwealth has a long, and virtually uniform, history of strongly disfavoring covenants in restraint of trade."); Morgan's [Home Equip. Corp. v. Martucci], 136 A.2d 838, 843 (Pa. 1957)] ("It has long been the rule at common law, that contracts in restraint of trade made independently of a sale of business or contract of employment are void as against public policy regardless of the valuableness of the consideration exchanged therein."). To determine the enforceability of a provision in restraint of trade that is ancillary, or supplementary, to the principal purpose of a contract, we employ a balancing test to determine the reasonableness of the restraint in light of the parties' interests that the restraint aims to protect and the harm to other contractual parties and the public. See Hess v. Gebhard & Co. Inc., 570 Pa. 148, 808 A.2d 912, 917-18 (2002) (discussing the development of the balancing test); see also GeoDecisions [v. Data Transfer Solutions, LLC], 2010 WL 5014514 at *4 (M.D. Pa. 2010)]. As part of this balancing test, courts also consider the reasonableness of the restraint's geographical scope as well as its duration of time. See Socketo, 126 A.3d 1274. Similarly, the Restatement (Second) of Contracts delineates the following test, identified as "the rule of reason," for evaluating the reasonableness of ancillary restraints on competition:

- (1) A promise to refrain from competition that imposes a restraint that is ancillary to an otherwise valid transaction or relationship is unreasonably in restraint of trade if
 - (a) the restraint is greater than is needed to protect the promisee's legitimate interest, or
 - (b) the promisee's need is outweighed by the hardship to the promisor and the likely injury to the public.

RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF CONTRACTS § 188(1). Further, this Court has explained that the reasonableness test is more stringent when examining restrictive covenants ancillary to an employment agreement than when evaluating restrictive covenants ancillary to the sale of a business. Hayes v. Altman, 438 Pa. 451, 266 A.2d 269, 271 (1970).

While the enforceability of a no-hire provision ancillary to a services contract between two businesses is an issue of first impression for this Court, we will apply the foregoing reasonableness test that applies to ancillary restraints on trade. Here, the no-hire provision was ancillary to the principal purpose of the shipping contract between PLS and Beemac. The no-hire provision is a restraint on trade because the two commercial entities agreed to limit competition in the labor market by promising to restrict the employment mobility of PLS employees. See RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF CONTRACTS § 186(2) ("A promise is in restraint of trade if its performance would limit competition in any business"). PLS had a legitimate interest in preventing its business partners from poaching its employees, who had developed specialized knowledge and expertise in the logistics industry during their training at PLS. See PLS's Brief at 25, 32; Morgan's, 136 A.2d at 846 (recognizing an employer has an interest in preventing its employees from using their specialized knowledge and skills in competition with the employer).

However, the no-hire provision is both greater than needed to protect PLS's interest and creates a probability of harm to the public. It is overbroad because it precludes Beemac, and any of its agents or independent contractors, from hiring, soliciting, or inducing any PLS employee or affiliate for the one-year term of the contract plus two years after the contract ends. The no-hire provision precluded Beemac from hiring or soliciting all PLS employees, regardless of whether the PLS employees had worked with Beemac during the term of the contract. As the Superior Court noted, "[b]y the plain reading of the language of this restrictive provision, it was meant to have effect in the broadest possible terms." Pittsburgh Logistics Sys., 202 A.3d at 808.

Further, the no-hire provision creates a likelihood of harm to the public, i.e., non-parties to the contract. The no-hire provision impairs the employment opportunities and job mobility of PLS employees, who are not parties to the contract, without their knowledge or consent and without providing consideration in exchange for this impairment. Further, the injury to PLS employees is not hypothetical. In this case, PLS enforced the no-hire provision by seeking to enjoin Beemac from employing the former PLS employees who had already left PLS and obtained employment with Beemac. If PLS was successful, the effect of its enforcement of the no-hire provision would have deprived its former employees of their current jobs and livelihoods. Moreover, the no-hire provision undermines free competition in the labor market in the shipping and logistics industry, which creates a likelihood of harm to the general public. See, e.g., Donald J. Polden, Restraints on Workers' Wages and Mobility: No-Poach Agreements and the Antitrust Laws, 59 SANTA CLARA L. REV. 579, 610 (“[T]he high percentage of U.S. workers who are subject to agreements and covenants restricting their employment opportunities are contributing to slow wage growth and rising inequality. For example, recent studies have demonstrated that worker wages are 4%-5% higher in states that do not recognize or enforce worker non-compete restraints.”) (footnotes omitted). Balancing PLS’s interest against the overbreadth of the no-hire provision and the likelihood of harm to the public, we conclude that the no-hire provision is unreasonably in restraint of trade and therefore unenforceable.

Id. at 935-936 (footnotes omitted).

The Pittsburgh Logistics decision is almost directly on point with the issues presented to this Court on preliminary objections, with one major distinction: Plaintiff solely seeks money damages against Defendant here for its alleged breach of the no-hire provision. Plaintiff seeks no equitable remedies including that Defendant be enjoined from employing Tyler Wise. In Pittsburgh Logistics, by contrast, PLS sought to enforce the restrictive covenant by seeking equitable relief in the form of a court order enjoining Beemac from employing the former PLS employees. Plaintiff stresses that the nature of the relief it seeks is of great significance, and in fact dispositive to the Court’s inquiry. We agree.

Plaintiff accurately cites to a line of cases for the proposition that where money damages are sought to enforce agreed-upon restraints of trade, the reasonableness of a contractual term is not relevant to assessing its enforceability. Our Supreme Court, addressing the enforcement of a non-compete covenant, explained:

Although as a general rule, [restrictive covenants] are unenforceable if overly broad in time, territory or protection or if they create an unreasonable hardship, ... those rules are equitable in nature. This however is not an equitable action. We need not pass on whether the covenant in the case before us is too harsh to be enforced in equity. Harsh though it may be, it was entered into by appellant with his eyes open, and there is nothing in the record to indicate that it was not part of a completely armslength [sic] bargain between knowing and willing parties. Appellant must now live with the bargain which he struck, just as he would have to live with any other unadvantageous [sic] term that was used against him in a contract action at law.

Krauss v. M. L. Cluster & Sons, Inc., 434 Pa. 403, 254 A.2d 1, 3 (1969). The Court concluded that “[i]n an action at law, the reasonableness of any given contractual term simply is not relevant[.]” further noting that “appellant has simply argued as he would in an equitable action, that the covenant is completely Unenforceable because it was Drawn in an overly broad way.” Id. at 3 n.2.

This principle, that the reasonableness of a restrictive covenant is irrelevant where the moving party seeks damages, has been followed in subsequent decisions. In Boyce v. Smith-Edwards-Dunlap Co., the employer sought to recover damages to its business, profit, and goodwill resulting from the employee's breach of the restrictive covenant. 580 A.2d 1382 (Pa. Super. 1990). The trial court granted a directed verdict for the employee after finding that the restrictive covenant was unreasonably broad. Id. at 1388. On appeal, the Superior Court clarified that “[the employer] did not bring an action at equity to enforce the restrictive covenants. Had [the employer] done so, then the trial court would have been correct in considering the reasonableness of the covenants. Instead, [the employer] brought an action at law to recover for damages allegedly sustained as a result of [the employee's] breach of the covenants." Id. at 1388 (citing Krauss). The Superior Court thus vacated the directed verdict and remanded to the trial court to determine the damages sustained by the employer. Id. at 1391. See also, Gresh v. Potter McCune Co., 344 A.2d 540, 543 (Pa. Super. 1975) (holding that while the reasonableness of the restrictive covenant "would be crucial if appellant had sued in equity to enjoin [appellee] from enforcing the covenant[.]" appellant had instead sought damages in an action at law and the reasonableness of the restrictive covenant was therefore not to be considered); Graham Co. v. Griffing, 2011 WL 13377512, at *1 n 1 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 30, 2011) ("Under governing Pennsylvania precedent, the reasonableness of contractual terms is irrelevant to the extent Plaintiff seeks damages at law for alleged breach of the [non-solicitation] covenants as opposed to equitable remedies to enforce or modify them," citing Krauss and Boyce); and Vibra-Tech Engineers, Inc. v. Kavalek, 849 F. Supp. 2d 462, 491 (D.N.J. 2012) ("under Pennsylvania law, covenants in an Employment Agreement are enforceable at law (i.e. claims for money damages) so long as the covenants are not unconscionable or otherwise defective," citing Krauss and Boyce).

Our Supreme Court in Pittsburgh Logistics explicitly extended to no-hire provisions the same reasonableness test it applied in determining the enforceability of other ancillary provisions in restraint of trade. Pittsburgh Logistics at 935. As such, the line of cases cited above - holding that the reasonableness of a contractual term in a restraint of trade provision is not relevant where money damages are sought - applies equally to no-hire provisions. Accordingly, the Pittsburgh Logistics reasonableness test does not apply here because Plaintiff has not sought equitable relief. Instead, Plaintiff seeks to limit its remedy to damages caused by Defendant's alleged breach of the no-hire provision.¹ As such, this Court agrees with Plaintiff that Pittsburgh Logistics does not preclude its action against Defendant as "BMarko is in no position to object to paying damages for its [alleged] breach of a restriction that it, a sophisticated business, willingly entered into, particularly when the claim itself is limited to the very employee intended to be covered by the restriction."

The [Pittsburgh Logistics] court, however, seemed to stop short of holding no-poaching agreements to be per se invalid while apparently ruling out any injunctive relief. In other words, while PLS could presumably cure the overbreadth problem with narrower drafting, any court order to not hire workers of a counterparty would necessarily impact third parties. Thus, either these agreements are always unenforceable in Pennsylvania, or they may be enforced only when relief against the counterparty is limited to damages.

Charles A. Sullivan, Poaching, 71 Am. U. L. Rev. 649, 666 (2021) (footnotes omitted).

² Had this Court found that the Pittsburgh Logistics applied here, we would have likely concluded that the no-hire provision is not enforceable thereunder, primarily because the provision is overbroad and harms the public. As in Pittsburgh Logistics, the no-hire provision is ancillary to the principal purpose of the services contract between the parties and is clearly a restraint on trade. Furthermore, Plaintiff has a legitimate interest in preventing its business partners from poaching its employees. Nevertheless, under Pittsburgh Logistics, the language is greater than needed to protect Plaintiff's interest. It is overbroad because it precludes Defendant from hiring "any current or former WebFX employee," for a five-year period. This language is notably broader than the provision criticized in Pittsburgh Logistics as it precludes Defendant from the hiring of not only current WebFX employee but any former WebFX employees. The hiring preclusion also extends

Accordingly, this Court enters the following:

ORDER

AND NOW, this 5th day of May 2022, upon consideration of the Defendant's Preliminary Objections to Plaintiff's Complaint, it is hereby DIRECTED that the Preliminary Objections are OVERRULED. Defendant is directed to Answer the Complaint as required under the Rules of Civil Procedure.

for an overly long five-year term. Furthermore, it applies regardless of whether any of Plaintiff's employees had ever worked with Defendant.

Second, with regard to the probability of harm to the public, the Pittsburgh Logistics Court recognized two types of harm: harm to non-parties to the contract and harm to the general public. Id. at 936. With regard to the former, the Supreme Court determined in Pittsburgh Logistics that the no-hire provision "impairs the employment opportunities and job mobility of [the promisee's] employees, who are not parties to the contract, without their knowledge or consent and without providing consideration in exchange for this impairment." Id. at 936. This similar harm is presented here. Moreover, as further recognized in Pittsburgh Logistics, no-hire provisions undermine free competition in the labor market in the industries involved, which creates a likelihood of harm to the general public. Id.

As such, had this Court reached the issue, we would have concluded that in balancing Plaintiff's legitimate interest against the overbreadth of the no-hire provision and the likelihood of harm to the public, the no-hire provision is unreasonably in restraint of trade and unenforceable under Pittsburgh Logistics.

Plaintiff admits that the no-hire provision in the Contract is overbroad in that it "would not be enforceable as to employees who were never assigned to BMarko and for whom WebFX would have no enforceable and legitimate business interest in preventing their hire[.]" (Plaintiff's Brief p. 7) Assuming we had reached the issue, Plaintiff argued that this Court could "blue-pencil," or reform, the overly broad restrictions to protect Plaintiff's legitimate business interest by applying the restriction just to Tyler Wise. This Court would have declined Plaintiff's invitation to blue-pencil or reform the language because such a remedy is available only to a court of equity. See e.g., WellSpan Health v. Bayliss, 869 A.2d 990, 996 n.2 (Pa. Super. 2005) ("It is well-established in Pennsylvania that a court of equity has the authority to reform a non-competition covenant in order to enforce only those provisions that are reasonably necessary for the protection of the employer"); see also, Hess v. Gebhard & Co., Inc., 808 A.2d 912, 920 & n. 7 (Pa. 2002) (where the covenant imposes restrictions broader than necessary to protect the employer, "we have repeatedly held that a court of equity may grant enforcement limited to those portions of the restrictions which are reasonably necessary for the protection of the employer"); and Hillard v. Medtronic, Inc., 910 F.Supp. 173, 176-77 (M.D.Pa.1995) (under Pennsylvania law, where a non-compete is unreasonably overbroad, "such a restriction can be modified by an equity court in an effort to make it reasonable").
